

Merry Christmas and a very Happy New Year!

I have news for my clients. I have decided to retire as of December 15 this year. I have had 25 great years on Elgin Street as a RMT, and am so grateful for the career I have had.

In 1995 I successfully passed my board exams, and qualified as a Registered Massage Therapist. That was a very happy day in my life, as well as my family's. I was living in Richmond at the time, and was ready for a change. I drove all over the mainland considering locations. I knew as soon as I drove through the downtown of PoCo that this was the place. I did put some research into it, but it was mostly an intuitive feeling that we would be happy here. So I packed up my household, and brought along my 11 year old daughter (who wasn't too sure about the move) and my 7 year old son (who thought this was quite an adventure), along with our nanny (yes she looked after me too), and Chimo the cat (who was difficult - he was a cat), and off we went. It worked out really well for us all, even the cat (he never admitted it though).

Port Coquitlam Therapeutic Massage was one of the first massage therapy clinics in the area. Many local residents had never heard of massage therapy, but we were accepted and have enjoyed our 25 years as part of PoCo's downtown community.

The clinic will carry on with Josh Pratt in charge, and I hope as adjustments in staff are made, that you will chose to stay with the clinic. We are still trying to find a replacement for me but that will happen soon. The clinic will be closed for a few weeks during the holiday season for redecorating.

I will miss my clients and all the interesting experiences I have at the clinic, but I am also ready for the next chapter in my life. All I can say is thank you, thank you, thank you. All the best to you all!
